Weather Conditions.

The northwestern high-pressure area has advanced slowly southeastward with diminished pressure. It has become divided into areas of high pressure—the crest of one overlying the unner Ohio valley and the other extending from the lower Missouri valley southwestward into Texas, causing lower temperatures to prevail over the southern states. Considerable cloudy weather prevails over the southerstern section, due to a disturbance southward from the western siderable cloudy weather literals of the southerstern section, due to a disturbance southward from the western coast of Flarida. The precipitation for the past twenty-four hours has been decidedly less, occurring principally at stations along the Atlantic coast.

Canditions are favorable for fair weather over this section tonight and Sunday, with warmer Sunday.

ENEMY DEAD GIVE DRAMATIC PROOF

Of Fear of Complete Strategical Disturbance of Line in France.

American Headquarters in France. Friday, Sept. 6.—(Reuters.)—The out-standing event of the week on the American front has been the passage of the Vesle and the carrying of the line forward to the borders of the Aisne. Not that the advances was a striking military operation itself; its admirable character belies that very fact and thanks to the blows that Gen-Mangin struck claewhere the advance been almost a walkover, but it be remembered that there were Americans with Mangin's army as well as with Degoutte's and it was they who helped to deal the blow which withered the German divisions along the Vesle Already by sheer strategy, Mangin's army has displaced some thirty miles of the enemy's front and is removing it at one extremity almost a third of that distance northward. That the Germans know they have to fear an even more complete strategical disturbance at its hands is dramatically proved by the dead, with which they tried to bar the path. Those dead lying at Juvigny plateau were not sacrificed in any reckless spirit; they were devoted to an attempt to frustrate the greatest danger that now threatens the German line in France.

No Wonder at Sacrifice. The French have possessed them-selves of the plateau northward of Landricourt on one side of the Allette and have reached the ravine at Vaux-aillon on the other, while further nort

they are on the borders of the forest of Coucy. Seeing that they have thus penetrated the line which one had almost grown to regard as a German frontier, it is no wonder the enemy is sacrificing men, guns and morale in a des perate effort to gain breathing time for some fresh allotment of their re-serves, since hereabout the massif of St. Gobain between La Fere and Laon is the essential hinge of the line. That hinge broken, more disaster would happen them then from the fracture than of any other part of the line.

Flanges of Hinge.

In the efforts to avert such a calamity, the Germans have brought one division by road from Metz and another from Rheims, sending them almost starving into the battle. But the defense of St. Gobain means much defense of St. Gobain means much more than the defeat of Mangin's army, for Laon and St. Quentin are flanges of the hinge whose pin is at La. Fere and one point is as essential to its security as any other of the three. But for the American forces, the interest is in the southernment of the interest is in the southernmost of the three, since, should it give way, they will have had a most creditable hand in the business.

And after Gen. Mangin's telling successes, all eyes will naturally riveted on the two armles which closing up, one from the west, the other from the south, on the positions by which Laon is still so formidably

American Transports Chased by U-Boats, But British Destroyer Comes Up in Nick of Time.

London, Sept. 7.—(I. N. S.)—Two German submarines that were pursuing two American transports which had become separated from their convoy, were sunk in the English Channel by British and French destroyers just as it began to appear that the American troops were surely doomed.

The transports were approaching the English coast when the U-boats suddenly appeared.

Twelve of the ships headed for safety and the others which were cut off, darted for a French port.

The submarines and the convoying destroyers were trailed half-way across the channel.

A long string of empty transports was moving outward on the return voyage to America and a submarine was coming up to attack them, but when two miles away, the U-boat commander saw the other transports and started off to attack them.

The submarine submcraged, but came to the surface again about 1,000 yards from the troop ships. The submersisting the water for any further signs of the enemy.

One of the vessels attacked is a large British freighter and the other sa a French ship. Both steamers were about 250 miles from this port when the encounter took place,

What Forced Retreat. The enemy's retreat was forced primarily, Gep. March said, by two operations. The first was that of the British on the Arras-Peronne front and the other was the advance of the ish on the Arras-Peronne front and the other was the advance of the Franco-American troops across the Soissons plateau. The Hindenburg line is now only ten miles away from the advancing allies at its farthest sec-tor.

Official reports to the department show that the Franco-Americans had reached the Aisne on a ten-mile front last night, while the French and Amer-

MAX MILLER REACHES CHICAGO WITH MAIL

As Told by a Private

There is a singular vividness about this letter from a private in the marines to his sister. The writer, coming from an experience with modern war at its worst, is able to tell something of what it means. Several of his revelations must have escaped the censorship by a hair. He writes:

"A few days ago we made an attack and gained our objective with practically no fighting. As our lines advanced, somebody in the German lines yelled. "Marines!" The Germans began running and for a few minutes it looked like a riot. About a week ago sixty of us were going through the weeds to our positions, We got lost and before we realized that we were not in our own lines we found that we were in the very midst of a German machine gun nest. We began firing and the Germans began surrendering. We backed out of the woods with 159 men and three officers as prisoners. Our losses were very light.

"Rut, God! It has been awful. Our

Washington, Sept. 7.—The situation on the western front, Gen. March told the senate military committee today, is more satisfactory this morning than it has been in months. Good progress is being made, he said, and the outlook is very bright. At no point along the front where the present battle is raging are the allies more than twelve miles from the Hindenburg line, while the upper part of this line has been pierced by the British troops.

The committee was told there are now between 90,000 and 100,000 American troops with the British forces.

Improvement in the transportation facilities continue to progress, Gen. March said, and the number of ships in use is not only being increased, but the "turn around" is being gradually cut down. Troop ships are now being anloaded in French ports in three or four days, while the time for unloading cargo carriers has been reduced antil now from ten to fifteen days are required.

Organization of the first American field army in France is progressing so rapidly that, Gen. March told members of the separate military committee today.

"I wouldn't take a hundred thousand dollars for the experience of what I have been through, and if it were within my power to say, wouldn't go through it again for a million. Of course, the nightmare and horror of it will always be in my mind, but the memory of the Godgiven, splendid herolam of our boys is something that few men will have to look back upon. They are about all gone no, but they stopped the big German drive. The French papers give us credit for saving Paris, and I really believe the Germans would be in Paris mow if we had not held.

"I take it all back about Empey and Private Peat being liars. I personally saw and went through things more harrowing than anything they write. Much of our fighting was hand-to-hand fighting. The German bellows like a cow when you run a bayonet into him. We stormed hundreds of machine guns and they would atay at their guns mowing us down like leaves until we closed with them. Then they would throw up the hands and holler "kamarad" and we we promptly run a bayonet through the You have probably read a little of we we did in the papers."
